

The DFTA Flexodruck Fachverband e.V., based in Stuttgart (Germany), is a flexography association for European and German companies, such as suppliers, prepress and printing companies and represents more than 300 companies of the flexographic industry. It is our job and our mission to represent flexography interests to the outside world. We provide advice and support to our members and associated companies in order to prepare them for future challenges. In our role as an association, we have made it our objective to make flexography the most important method used in package printing. In association and collaboration with many international associations, we have helped writing the history of flexography and will contribute to its future development. Collaboration and exchange of information between associations on different levels as well as technical research have significantly promoted the development of the flexographic method. Today, it is one of the leading methods in package printing and will continue to grow in importance. With our various facilities and events, we are well prepared for it.
